Still "Too Heavy a Load": Womanist Theological Freight in the Wake of White Fragility and Patriarchy

Do 29.06.2023

12-14 Uhr

T1/T2 (FB01 Wallstr. 7/7a)

Stacey Floyd-Thomas

E. Rhodes and Leona B. Carpenter
Chair Professor of Ethics and Society

Stacey Floyd-Thomas will explore the ethical task of the Black female liberation theologian to reconstruct and redeem from invisibility the challenges and resources of African American women in light of the history of the centuries-long struggle to unload the sacred creeds, social ills, toxic right-wing politics fueled by Eurocentric racism and male chauvinism. Her lecture will introduce womanist theological ethics as it uncovers the burdens and blights of biblical antiquity and contemporary society by offering the critical resources and razor-sharp alternative ways of thinking, believing, and living that illuminates African American women's painful and persistent struggle to hold their racial, gender and religious identities intact.

Stacey Floyd-Thomas is an internationally recognized scholar and leading voice in liberation theology and Christian social ethics who provides leadership to several US based and international organizations that educate, advocate, support and shape the strategic work of individuals, initiatives, and institutions in their organizing efforts of championing and cultivating equity, diversity, and inclusion via organizations such as Black Religious Scholars Group (BRSBG), Society for the Study of Race, Ethnicity and Religion (SRER), Strategic Ethical Expert Solutions (SEES), Society of Christian Ethics (SCE) and the American Academy of Religion (AAR).
